

I remember getting the first email, and I was immediately interested because I've always loved riddles, and secret societies and all that cool stuff. It was in the middle of the summer, after a while--four documents had already been posted--Katie was like, let's get a group together and figure this all out. I was really excited, I was the first one to DM her and was like 'yeah, let's totally do this.' So we did, and it has gone from 3 members to like 20 of us, and now there is over a hundred members. And that is just crazy to me because originally a lot of people were not interested at all, and now there is a good group of us that are willing to figure this out. Now there is a good group of us who are really willing to figure this out. There are a lot of things that we haven't really figured out. From the documents I can gather that PS is a society that has been here since the beginning. That these people found it, that they have been searching for it ever since they lost it. It's this feeling, and this, the way that the room makes them feel. It just helps them feel at home, or whatever. It is just so secretive, and we have so many questions that we need to find out. But it is interesting.
